Lemons to Lemonade in the Library:

The library has been of great service to me. The beginning of my physical therapy student career was established in the library. The quiet atmosphere, the large windows, the friendly staff, the candy jar, and the diversity of students studying in the library made this the perfect place to "camp out" and study for hours. In addition to the wonderful study atmosphere, I was able to attend a class on the research database that opened my eyes to the vastness of information available to me. This information proved very useful throughout my student career, giving me plenty of resources to aid in my papers and studies. The staff were always willing to help and offer a smile, and I knew I could ask them for help in anything. I almost applied for a job at the library because I wanted to be a part of this group, but I decided I needed to use it for studying more than for making some money. I am very grateful for the library and what it has been for me during my time as a student, and I would recommend it to anyone. Without the library, I may not even know what a lemon is, much less how to make lemonade out of it.
